Confidential Data Requests

Confidential Data Requests

Data are considered confidential when they have information about a specific business or individual. Confidential information is not released to the general public.

The law provides limited instances in which confidential data may be released. For instance, LMID may provide confidential information to government agencies or their contractors for economic planning and development purposes.

Recipients of confidential data may use it only for statistical purposes and are restricted from releasing it to unauthorized parties.

To make a request or learn more about obtaining confidential data regulations and requirements, call (916) 262-2162 and ask to speak to the Confidential Data Coordinator.
